Source: Wikipedia Andrographis paniculata or dai-pian is a Chinese medicinal herb with an entire genus of andrographis. Andrographis paniculata, the main species of the genus, has been used in traditional Chinese medicine since the Han dynasty. In China, andrographis paniculata is a prescription of Panax notoginseng and the treatment of chronic infectious diseases. In other parts of the world, it is used to treat digestive and liver diseases, pneumonia, urinary tract infections, dermatitis, and inflammation. It is often prescribed together with other herbs, particularly the Chinese herb Eucommia ulmoides, which it enhances. A. paniculata extracts and decoctions are very well absorbed, particularly when they are administered with hot water. The WHO has classified the andrographis plant and its extracts as a safe and effective remedy against most sexually transmitted infections. There are two components to the treatment. One is to help the immune system fight the pathogens and the other is to relieve the symptoms of the disease. The curative effects of A. paniculata extract are reported to be caused by the chemical ingredient neolignans. When the andrographis is ingested, the compound responsible for the effects is also taken in. This compound is destroyed by the gut microorganisms in the digestive system. A wave front image of the sun is a series of still images taken in a short period of time to form a movie. The movie's speed is matched to the speed of the waves in order to make the image appear as still as possible. In the movie, the front of the sun consists of hot and cool material moving at different speeds. The hot material is the dark-colored part, called the photosphere 82157476af
